

White

White tea (白茶, Bái Chá, "White Tea") is defined not by its cooking process but rather by its lack of one. White tea is the only category of tea that is, by definition, raw. This means that it cannot be described in terms of oxidation, because it starts off unoxidized (like green tea) and slowly oxidizes over time.

Sources:

- <https://westchinatea.com/tea/white-tea/>

Revision #4

Created 22 July 2024 04:22:39 by Farrah

Updated 16 December 2024 00:54:22 by Farrah